Dear Mr. President of United States of America,

I hope that You are not too busy sorting out hurricane disasters and burning forests of Yours to read this open letter of mine.

Polar bears and emperor penguins suffer, children of polluted cities have breathing problems right now. Climate change is unfortunately not fake news. It's hard for kids to understand why we adults seem to do nothing.

What if they do instead? This is a book about a brave girl who saves polar bears, emperor penguins and her sick brother. She wants to stop pollution and climate change to save the world. Do You agree, that we all should be as courageous as this little girl called Katri is, Mr. President?

Our children might be our last hope achieving results in these world-class problems. Including You Mr. Trump, President of United States of America. I maybe write fiction, but You should act based on facts.

We are all in the same boat, as we Finnish people say. So, let's save the World first.

Warm(ing) greeting from rainy Finland,

Martti Linna
